

Mauritius' southern coast, known as Savanne, features some of the country's wildest and most attractive scenery. Here you'll find basalt cliffs, sheltered sandy coves and hidden falls. Beyond the shoreline lie endless sugar-cane fields and forests that clothe the hillsides in a patchwork of vibrant greens. The viewpoints in this area are well worth visiting while in the south of Mauritius. This remarkable part of Mauritius certainly displays Mauritius' wild side, where the break in the reef allows the waves on this side to break with force. If you would love to see the power of nature yourself, the best place to do so is to stand on the cliffs above the Gris-Gris beach.
